Boogeybook

How power can change the purest heart

Written by the Supreme Boogeyman.

Angstland Feartopia had turned grey and silent. Children no longer feared the Boogeyman, and the monsters drained away every beautiful thing.

The Supreme Boogeyman chained the magical Boogeybook in the deepest pit. Blue Sky was trusted to guard it.

Blue Sky wanted children to dream again. She wrote of two distant worlds: one filled with water, the other with fire.

Purple Bubble Blobs flooded the Sand Kingdom. Even Klaas Vaak could not protect the sand from so much water.

Klaas Vaak turned the kingdom to stone. But the Flameians heated the sand into glass... and everything crashed down.

Children everywhere dreamed the same war. They were afraid to sleep, and their parents grew frightened too.

Adults searched for answers in money and power. But imagination, a smile, and a comforting story cannot be bought.

Below the kingdom, Klaas Vaak and the wizard raised a stone wall around Earth's core. The Flameians set it ablaze.

Blue Sky wrote that Klaas Vaak had won and thought it was over. Far away, the war still raged.

Klaas Vaak found the Supreme Boogeyman and showed him the truth: a broken Earth and frightened children.

The Supreme Boogeyman confronted Blue Sky. “Whoever writes in the Boogeybook but forgets the answers destroys the world!”

Blue Sky begged him to finish the story. He took the quill and said, “Fear is a poor guide when writing an ending.”

He apologized and told the truth: a pen can do more harm than any weapon.

With one sentence, he made things right. The Boogeyman Beater Club would protect children's imagination and innocence.

The world was safe again. Children dreamed peacefully as the Supreme Boogeyman kept watch. Sleep well, until the next story.